It was while working as a harbormaster in the small coastal town of Morro Bay, California, that Pullen's passion for the ocean ignited. He witnessed firsthand the rampant poaching and environmental destruction that threatened the fragile marine ecosystem. Horrified, he decided to take action.

With limited resources but unwavering determination, Pullen launched a one-man crusade to protect the ocean. He patrolled the waters in his small boat, gathering evidence of illegal fishing and pollution. He worked tirelessly to educate the public about the importance of marine conservation and advocated for stricter environmental regulations.

Pullen's efforts soon caught the attention of the authorities. He faced threats, intimidation, and even physical violence from those who sought to silence him. But he refused to be deterred. Armed with a keen eye for detail, a deep knowledge of the law, and an unyielding spirit, Pullen relentlessly pursued the corrupt officials and environmental criminals who were destroying the ocean.
