Garland was born in Grand Rapids, Minnesota, to Ethel Marion Milne and Frank Gumm. Her parents were vaudeville performers, and Garland began performing at a young age. She made her film debut in 1929, and she quickly became one of the most popular child stars in Hollywood. Garland's early films included The Wizard of Oz (1939), Meet Me in St. Louis (1944), and Easter Parade (1948).

In the 1950s, Garland's career began to decline. She struggled with personal problems, including drug addiction and mental illness. She also had a difficult relationship with her studio, MGM. Garland was fired from MGM in 1951, and she spent the next several years trying to rebuild her career.

In the 1960s, Garland made a comeback. She starred in a successful television series, The Judy Garland Show (1963-1964), and she also released several successful albums. Garland's career was cut short when she died of a drug overdose on June 22, 1969, at the age of 47.

Judy Garland was a talented actress, singer, and dancer. She was one of the most popular stars of the Golden Age of Hollywood, and she left a lasting legacy on the entertainment industry. Garland's story is a tragic one, but it is also a story of triumph and resilience.
