The Birth of the Doughnut

The earliest known doughnuts were simple balls of fried dough, known as olykoeks, made by the Dutch in the 17th century. These olykoeks were often filled with fruit or nuts and were a popular treat among sailors.

In the 19th century, American sailors brought the olykoeks to the United States, where they became known as doughnuts. The first recorded sale of doughnuts in the US was in 1809, at a coffee shop in New York City.

The Hole in the Doughnut

So, how did the doughnut get its signature hole? There are several theories.

One theory is that a Dutch housewife, Elizabeth Gregory, invented the hole in the doughnut in 1847. She was trying to make olykoeks for her son, but they always turned out doughy in the middle. So, she used a peppercorn to punch a hole in the center, which allowed the dough to cook evenly.

Another theory is that a Maine ship captain, Hanson Gregory, came up with the idea of the hole in 1840. He found that the doughnuts cooked more evenly when the hole was there, and it also made them easier to hold.

Doughnut Variations

Over the years, doughnuts have evolved into a wide variety of shapes and sizes. Some of the most popular variations include:

- Glazed doughnuts: These are the classic doughnuts, coated in a sweet glaze.
- Jelly-filled doughnuts: These doughnuts are filled with a sweet jelly, such as strawberry, raspberry, or blueberry.
- Chocolate doughnuts: These doughnuts are made with chocolate dough or are coated in chocolate.
- Cake doughnuts: These doughnuts are denser and sweeter than regular doughnuts, and are often made with cake batter.

- Apple cider doughnuts: These doughnuts are made with apple cider and have a slightly sweet and tart flavor.
